Mere Dad Ki Maruti Movie Free Download 2019 in Hindi/EnglishQ: PostgreSQL: division by zero and query optimization (POSTGIS) I am using the PostgreSQL RDBMS and the PostgreSQL backend for PostGIS. I have two tables: City and Weather, where City is the main table with about 15M records. The relationship is that City.id is the foreign key in the Weather table. Occasionally, a weather forecast may indicate zero for a certain country. This creates an error in my DB: ERROR: division by zero So, I have to take action before executing the query to check if this is going to happen. I've started to do this by creating a new view: CREATE OR REPLACE VIEW view1 as SELECT COALESCE(COUNT(w.ID),0)/COALESCE(COUNT(c.ID),0) AS ratio FROM City c, Water w WHERE w.Country='ARGENTINA' and performing this query: SELECT * FROM view1 WHERE... The SQL query takes a lot of time to execute (around 600 seconds in my machine), it is very slow. Can you think of a better way to perform this operation? EDIT I created a simple query on my DB to check how long does it take to execute a simple query: SELECT version() I also ran a test, where I create a dummy table with about 20k records: CREATE TABLE test1 AS SELECT mod(random() * 100000, 10000) AS Test FROM generate_series(1,10000) AS a; This is the query: SELECT count() AS Test FROM test1 and I run it 5 times: SELECT count() AS Test FROM test1 SELECT count() AS Test FROM test1 SELECT count() AS Test FROM test1 SELECT count() AS Test FROM test1 SELECT count() AS Test FROM test1 and then I calculate the average. The result for the dummy table: Test
