While the year's end is approaching, holidaymakers in ski chalets at the top of Europe's largest range of winter resorts have continued to make their record numbers of visits. The latest figures obtained by Xinhua show that people from non-core provinces in eastern China, such as Zhejiang, Liaoning, Jilin and Heilongjiang, and Hong Kong and Macao, have made up a bigger proportion of visitors than before. The upturn in visitors from non-core provinces during winter, known as the color month, has continued this year, contributing to a higher growth of visitors in the first five months this year. However, the majority of visitors in ski chalets are locals from the same province or the nearby province or cities, according to James Wang, a statistics manager at the Loge Valley management committee. Huge number of visitors The Loge Valley management committee has 30 lodges which accommodate around 10, 000 to 13, 500 skiers and snowboarders during the winter season. More than 18 million people have visited the Loge Valley's ski resorts this year, up by 1. Zhang Yifang, executive vice president of the Loge Valley management committee, said the business was very healthy this year. "We have not experienced any shortage of apartments in the off season," she said. "Moreover, the winter season was very good this year with stable snow
